From the clergy

The Importance of a BREW!

If you're like me, a vital part of your morning routine is that first cup of tea. It should be a time of gradual awakening and welcoming the day; of looking forward to the joys that await. But in my head, I'm mentally listing all the activities and deadlines that lay ahead; the people I need to see, those tasks I need to start, those tasks I need to finish! Will I get it all done? Is it the same for you?

At this busy time of Easter with all our church, family and social events, it's easy to be preoccupied with the numerous jobs and errands to be done. We can quickly be overwhelmed by our 'busyness' and forget the important things of time with God and time with those we love. It's an unconscious and unhealthy habit.

On day 5 of the Lent Pilgrim Course, we're reminded of the story of the two sisters, Martha and Mary (Luke 10.38-42). In particular, how Martha is preoccupied with the practicalities of preparing and serving a meal to Jesus whilst her sister Mary simply sits at Jesus' feet and listens to what he has to say. Mary is still and attentive; but Martha is busy and more anxious about the practical duties of serving Jesus (the person) than the spiritual duties (and blessings) of serving Jesus (the Son of God). The Lent reflection on this story highlights a striking but obvious point; that our 'busyness' and anxieties "can steal joy, calm and fulfilment". But I have to ask myself, if it's so obvious – why do I repeatedly fail to realise it?

As we journey to, through and beyond Easter, how can we use this time to develop new and spiritually healthier habits? How can we avoid being caught up in the 'busyness' of all the practical tasks and activities of the season? How can we be more like Mary and still ourselves and be less like Martha where our anxieties and stresses steal our joy, our calm, our fulfilment?

For me, I'm going to take time during that first morning cup of tea to learn and practise a new and spiritually healthier habit; namely the importance of a BREW...

Be still. Take this time to calm your breathing and your thoughts. Make this a time of prayer; a time for talking and listening to God at the start of the day.

Recieve the Father's love. Open your heart to how God may work in you and through you today.

Consider how God's love may be shown in you and how may it be revealed to others as you complete your tasks.

Embrace God's gift of personhood. Accept and celebrate who you are; remember that God has made you and loves you for who you are today and not simply for what you can accomplish today.

Welcome the day and all its blessings. As you mentally list them, pray that all the tasks you do today and all the people you meet can be opportunities to receive God's blessings and reveal God's blessings in all you do.

Will you join me in developing this new spiritually healthier habit? Will you share it with others? I pray that you do. I pray that we will all support each other and remind each other.... of the importance of a BREW.

Amen.

Editor: Cambridge Definition of a brew: "if you brew tea, you add boiling water to make it a hot drink and if it brews, it gradually develops flavour in the container in which it was made..."
If you've ever made Karen a 'brew', you will know that her tea is not 'brewed' at all! It is a quick dip in and out for two seconds with a tea bag!! 😊

How do you make a church weekend work?

St Peter's Church weekend at Conwy Youth Hostel

When you set out to plan a church weekend, as we did only a month before it happened, there are loads of different ideas about what should happen on it. Plenty of people make suggestions, state their preferences, advise. What should the theme be? What will the programme look like? Is it an opportunity for studying, socialising, learning, worshipping, reflecting, analysing? We gave it a title. 'Celebration'. While we wanted to think about where we were at and where we were going as a church we thought the best place to start was with who we are and with the wonderful gifts the members of the congregation contribute to it in very different ways. Our ideas got assembled into a programme booklet for the weekend. The band practised – a bit – for a Saturday night ceilidh. The catering crew got the grub together. Taffy was eventually told what he was meant to be doing in the services. Various people came forward with ideas for workshops. People piled into cars, and in some cases, trains and set off for Conwy.

One thing we knew from past experience was that the Youth Hostel we were taking over was a good space for our needs. A vast main room has bands of windows right down both sides, one looking out across the town to the harbour and the distant sea, the other up the valley to the hills and mountains. It's a good space to meet, talk, chat, paint, play music, read, eat. The kitchens are plenty big enough for our group of 45 and the bedrooms are much classier than memories of how Youth Hostels used to be. Most people arrived by Friday evening and a few on Saturday and the programme started to unfold. How would it play out? Too much? Too little? Too loud? Too quiet? Too deep? Too shallow? After the final communion on Sunday morning there was time to reflect before we prepared and ate lunch and left for home. We looked back on quiet low-key services, on activities exploring our diversity and our many links beyond the church's four walls. We enjoyed the company of Julie and her daughter Naia, over from the Philippines and with us for the weekend after first meeting with church members over twenty years ago. Their company with us was very special. Workshops ranged from Lent reflections to mixed media painting with Quigong in between, not to mention the spiritual discipline of sourdough making. Some hiked up over Conwy mountain. Some didn't. Some went to meet the new lambs on Rob Wardle's farm. Most people threw themselves into the Saturday night Ceilidh. In between there was a lot of sitting around, chatting, and enjoying being together. Several people said similar things as they looked back. There didn't seem to be much organisation. It didn't seem busy. It was peaceful. It was fun. It was special to spend time together with each other. Somehow between us we created a time together which had a sense of . . . Celebration.

John Philipson

The end of an era as Rob retires from Cre8

In February 2004 I was lucky enough to get a three bedroomed council house on the Moss Rose estate. Lucky because I wouldn't get one now; the rules are much stricter. Back then, Tom was 17 and studying for his A levels at Henbury High School, Katy was in her first year at Bangor University. For eighteen months we had been living on our canal boat after several bad experiences with private landlords. Now we had the possibility of a home on dry land. And the Council were keen for us to have it. There were five houses along Parkgate Road which were unlettable because of very bad anti-social behavior from the neighbours, the houses had heavy dark brown steel grilles on them and the gardens were full of rubbish; they looked rough. Our house was one of these. But we set about sorting it out. Tom was just very pleased to get the new 'broadband' internet.

In May 2004 I applied to do a full-time degree course in Youth and Community Work and Applied Theology. For the previous two years I had been a volunteer at Focus and 6AB with David Mayers and the team. I loved it and wanted to do more. John Briggs, the Macclesfield Team Rector, proposed to the Church Council that I be supported with a bursary of five thousand pounds per year to enable me to study. I wouldn't have gone to university without it and I will always be grateful to John for seeing potential in me when others doubted my commitment and ability. I'd left school aged 16 with five O'levels and a very poor attendance and disciplinary record, which included getting into trouble with the police. John Briggs and the Macclesfield Team took a risk on me and allowed me to be their Student Youth Worker for three years. After 31 years of working in the building trade with no formal qualifications, I sat down in a lecture room at St John's College in Nottingham in September 2004. I was in a class of mostly fresh-faced students who were not much older than my children. I had an A4 pad, some biros and a big lever arch file and I wondered what 'theory' and 'praxis' was. And I hadn't a clue how to critically reflect, or how to write an essay. And yet I began to love it.

Three years later I graduated with a First Class Honours Degree with the highest mark ever awarded for written fieldwork; I was chuffed.

Meanwhile, Pip Mossdrop and David Mock had gathered together Christians from Macclesfield at St Barnabas Church. During May 2005 and into the summer there were a series of meetings to plan mission activities on the Moss Rose estate. I went along to the meetings. At first, I wasn't sure if this mission initiative was for me, I was a first year college student hearing radical new ideas about doing youth and community work from the bottom up. I was becoming passionate about incarnational ministry; about living and 'being with' people just as Jesus had done.

But again, someone saw that I had useful potential and they encouraged me to get involved. Pip Mossdrop had a quiet, affirming word in my ear and we began meeting to make things happen.

There were eight of us at the beginning. We met in our living room at 38 Parkgate Road and planned the holiday activities that were to become Cre8. Those first clubs in 2005 were memorable. A young lad tried to set fire to the altar cloth at St Barnabas. I had to physically restrain another lad to stop him stabbing someone with a vegetable knife. Fingers were cut peeling vegetables, clay was thrown up and stuck onto the church ceiling which then dried out during the following day and fell like a stone onto the Sunday morning congregation. We had to do some smoothing over with the churchwardens. The police were regularly called out when young people climbed onto the church roof after club. At one stage, the police were at almost every club, as 'volunteers'. We would often still be at club two hours after finishing. We would clear up, chat, reflect and pray together.

And so to the future. Cre8 is now in its 14th year and it's time for me to hang up my boots as paid Director. On 31st March I will retire from my role as Director Trustee. There is now a fantastically gifted and committed team of people running Cre8 and they don't need me anymore. It is simply wonderful for me to look at what we have created together. I have every confidence in the team at Cre8, from the young people and parents upwards; everyone is committed to make it work better and better. I am hugely grateful to those first volunteers and the leadership team in particular; for our shared faith and shared energy. I have been blessed by the many experiences, friendships, relationships, tears and laughter over the last fifteen years. Thank you; here's to the next chapter for us all.

LentPilgrim is 40 daily readings and reflections looking at the Beatitudes - eight short sayings of Jesus which all begin with the word 'Blessed'. These words have shaped history and turned many people's lives inside out. And they are affecting us too: God is working in us as we take time to dwell on these, and other, verses during the season of Lent.

A number of us are currently using the LentPilgrim material between Ash Wednesday and Palm Sunday. I say 'a number', because although I know we've sold about 50 copies of the booklet, several people are accessing this resource via an app on their smartphone, as a daily email to their inbox, or via their smart speaker. This means that, whatever your preferred way of engaging with the material, you can have a shared discussion with others.

So weekly groups have been running (Mondays at 11am & 8pm, Tuesdays at 7.30pm), LentPilgrim has been used within other regular gatherings, and some people have intentionally arranged to meet with 2 or 3 others during the week to talk about what they've read and/or heard. It's not too late to join in: there are a few booklets left, and you can access the online resource (go to www.churchofengland.org/pilgrim). Of course, our discipleship - our choosing to follow Jesus, allowing our lives to be affected by Him - continues after Lent. So I invite you to join me in using the follow-up EasterPilgrim material too. From Easter Day until Ascension Day, EasterPilgrim will take us on a 40-day journey through the Lord's Prayer - the prayer that Jesus taught his followers and which continues to shape the lives of Christians across the world.

Using the same range of ways to access the material, EasterPilgrim will provides us 'daily bread' of a short Bible reflection, an invitation to pray, and a suggestion for responding to the vision of the Lord's Prayer itself. However you take this Pilgrim Journey through Lent and Easter, make space. Allow God's word to dwell in you richly as we seek together to know Jesus better and to become more Christ-like in everything we are and everything we do.

What it feels like to be 'NOT INVITED':

I didn't know anything about this
 Everybody else knows about it, why didn't I know?
 Why have all those people been invited?
 Are they more important than me?
 Are they more trustworthy than me?
 Are they more Christian than me?
 I'm not in the right clique
 It's always the same people who are invited
 It seems that if you get invited to one group you get invited to lots of other groups
 They must think I have nothing to offer
 Maybe I don't have anything to offer
 I'll just keep quiet, sit in a corner when I come to church on a Sunday and go home by myself

What it feels like to be INVITED:

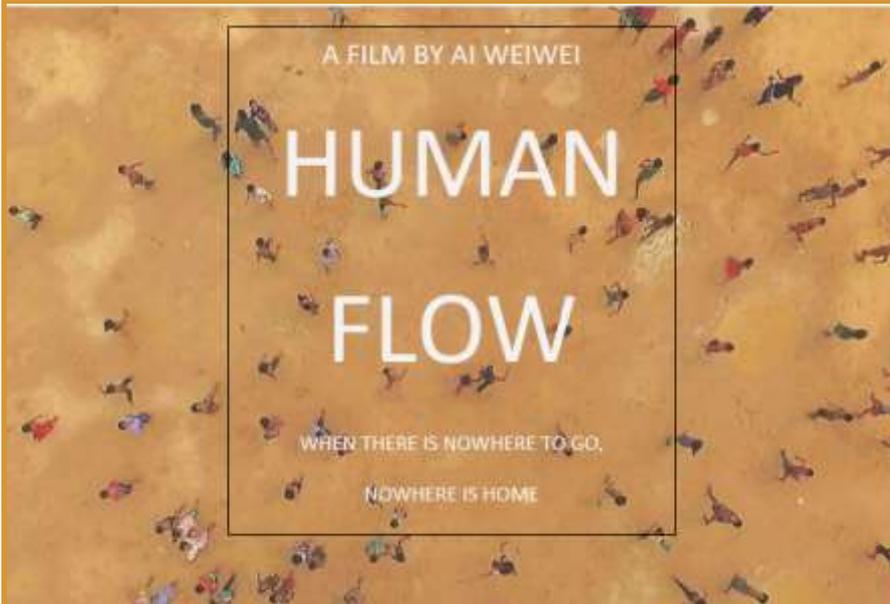

Who me?
 Are you sure?
 I've never been asked to do something like this
 I've always felt that I wasn't good enough
 I've always felt I'm not clever enough
 I've always felt like an outsider
 I'm not sure I can do this
 Will you give me some training?
 Are there any other new people? I don't want to be the only one doing it for the first time
 Do you think anyone will object?
 I feel so privileged to be asked. Thankyou.
 I'll walk into church on Sunday with my head held high.

The weekend of invitation – Friday 21st to Sunday 23rd June – offers every church the opportunity to do something where you can say 'be our guest'.

It can be big or small, for young or old, for a special group or for everyone. You might choose to invite people to something that's a regular part of your church activities, to a special guest event or to a guest service. You may go for just one event for guests or a multitude with every section of the church doing something on the Friday and Saturday and a guest service on the Sunday.

Think about who you might invite and what to invite them to?

“Establishing the understanding that we all belong to one humanity is the most essential step for how we might continue to coexist on this sphere we call Earth. I know what it feels like to be a refugee and to experience the dehumanisation that comes with displacement from home and country. As toddler group or Messy Church leaders, so much of our time is spent investing in others, thinking up creative ideas and trying to keep the momentum going. But giving so much of our time and energy can mean we don't always get a chance to take a breather and reflect on what we're doing. The Playtime National Conference offers the chance to take a step back, gather together and dream big for the year ahead. This year the conference will be in Wigan on Saturday 28 September it will be a great opportunity to join with hundreds of other toddler group leaders and helpers. You can find out more online:

I am hoping to take a group of people to the conference and if you would be interested in attending please contact me either by email or phone by Sunday 5th May: louise.williams@me.com or 07738 985116

Macclesfield Team Ministry

In the last issue of The Link I wrote about the new Team website that had just 'gone live'. It's now been around for two months and various amendments have been made to make it more accessible and clear. I hope you've had a chance to look around and see what's on. As hoped the site has made it easier for people to access details about baptisms and weddings. After a few teething problems, giving people a central place where they can find out about how we work together as a Team seems to be paying off. Most people enquiring about baptisms have been able to find out the information they need and book themselves on one of our courses. With the information they are providing Sue has had to chase people much less, being able to concentrate on confirming their place on the course. We hope that this time saving will also apply to those who want to book a wedding with us, but we have yet to put that to the test.

So its so far so good, time saved for Sue, and the details we need to help people provided much easier.

Do have a look round the site, remembering that its primary focus is to enable people to find out about the Team and what we offer.

If you have any comments please feed them back to me. Please also direct anyone who is asking about our children and young people's groups, baptisms and weddings to the site. The address is: www.maccteam.org.uk Thanks

Andy
